Last week Bright Automotive, an electric vehicle \(http://nlpc.org/category/keywords/electric-vehicles\) start-up company that General Motors \(http://nlpc.org/category/keywords/general-motors\) helped two years ago with an investment \(http://wheels.blogs.nytimes.com/2010/08/04/g-m-invests-in-plug-in-hybrid-startup/\) of at least $5 million from its venture capital arm, gave up hope on winning a $450 million loan from DOE's Advanced Technology Vehicle Manufacturing program. As the company announced the withdrawal of its loan application and that it would end operations, CEO Reuben Munger and COO Mike Donoughe sent (and released to the media) a letter \(http://download.gannett.edgesuite.net/detnews/2012/pdf/0228brightauto.pdf\) to DOE Secretary Steven Chu \(http://nlpc.org/category/people/steven-chu\) that sharply criticized the loan programs processes and outlined their frustrations.

"Bright has not been explicitly rejected by the DOE," the Bright executives wrote, "rather, we have been forced to say 'uncle....'"

Last week we received the fourth 'near final' Conditional Commitment letter since September 2010. Each new letter arrived with more onerous terms than the last. The first three were workable for us, but the last was so outlandish that most rational and objective persons would likely conclude that your team was negotiating in bad faith. We hope that as their secretary, this was not at your urging."
